Engg colleges defy govt, charge extra fee

College managements are collecting up to ₹35,000 more for facilities like library, Wi-Fi, lab, skill training and others

Many had surrendered seats

In 2012, the extra fee charged by engineering colleges became a major issue and complaints were filed against about 158 colleges. Several students had even surrendered their seats as they could not pay the excess fee. The then Executive Director of KEA, V Rashmi, submitted a report to the Higher Education Department which asked VTU to issue a circular restricting colleges from collecting any additional fee.

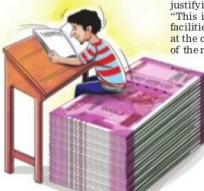

What students pay at KEA is just the tuition fee and what colleges collect is towards development fee, library fee, NSS-NCC fee, etc. We have been collecting this for several years. This year, VTU increased the affiliation fee following which some colleges increased the development fee.

DESPITE directives from the Union Ministry for Human Resource Development, Viveswaraiah Technological University, Belagavi, and even the state Higher Education Department against collection of excess fee from CET students, many colleges are continuing to do so. The first round of admissions to under-graduate engineering courses were completed recently and the second round is going on. Several students who have got seats at some of the engineering colleges in the city allege that the colleges are demanding excess fee in the name of facilities like library, e-journals, laboratory, Wi-Fi, skill training, IT support, etc. This ranges anywhere between ₹6,000 and ₹35,000.

The Admission Overseeing Committee, appointed by the government and headed by retired High Court Judge Anand Byrareddy too has been getting such complaints, sources said.

Some colleges have even announced details on the additional fee on their websites. For instance, R V College of Engineering is charging ₹55,400 for those who got admission under Common Entrance Test (CET) quota. Students from outside Karnataka have to pay ₹36,900 and those from outside the country have to shell out ₹46,900 for this academic year.

As per information available, other colleges which are allegedly collecting excess fee include NITTE Institute of Technology, Saptagiri College of Engineering, PES University south campus, Dayanand Sagar College of Engineering.

Earlier this year, private engineering colleges had demanded a 25 per cent hike in fees but the Higher Education Department managed to convince them not to hike it. But now, colleges are demanding excess fee to be paid during admission though the CET students have paid the tuition fee at Karnataka Examinations Authority.

The college managements are justifying the excess fee saying, "This is collected for the extra facilities available and provided at the campuses and is not part of the regular tuition fee."

"The additional fee is not only for the first year. We have to pay for all the four years. What is the use of getting a seat under government quota by clearing CET if we end up paying such huge amounts," questioned a student.

How much the colleges want

College	Excess Fee
RVCE, Bengaluru	₹35,400-₹46,900
NITTE Institute of Technology, Bengaluru	₹30,000-₹35,000
Saptagiri College of Engineering, Bengaluru	₹33,000
PES University south campus, Bengaluru	₹25,500

(As per the consensual agreement between the government and colleges, the annual fee for CET students is ₹50,500 and for COMEDK it is ₹1.70 lakh.)

BDA to hire young professionals to se

S LALITHA @ Bengaluru

IN a bid to professionalise its methods of selling its 2,370 flats, Bangalore Development Authority (BDA) has decided to set up a customer care centre within its head office with MBA graduates intermingling with potential buyers. The initial plan of going in for 'across the table' sale of flats will not withstand legal scrutiny, say top BDA officials.

BDA Commissioner Rakesh Singh said, "BDA staffers are presently responding to countless queries from those interested in purchasing flats in the midst of other work. Staff dedicated only to sell flats will be able to help the public better. I have asked my staff to set up a dedicated cell shortly in this connection."

MBA graduates with some industry experience could be hired, he added. "This would be a temporary appointment. After the flats are all sold, in say two or three months, this Centre could be closed," he said.

Total: 2,370 flats

Asked about the recent move planned to go in for sale of flats 'Across the Table' to good public to buy flats, Singh said, "It would not stand legal scrutiny as the system of allotting flats need to be a transparent process. We have to explore that aspect in detail." At present, BDA has flats of

BJP, Cong clash at underpass inauguration

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Bengaluru

A routine inauguration by Chief Minister Siddaramaiah of a newly constructed underpass turned into an unpleasant event with Congress and BJP workers fighting it out at the venue.

The underpass, constructed on the intersection of Magadi Road and Siddaramaiah Road near KIB Colony comes under the Govindraja Nagar ward whose corporator Umesh Shetty belongs to BJP.

Before the event began, Congress supporters of Govindraja Nagar MLA Priya Krishna objected to Umesh Shetty being seated on the dais. Immediately Shetty's supporters also started shouting and protesting. Police had a tough time controlling the crowd of both the parties. Shetty was finally escorted to the stage by the police, but Congress and BJP supporters would not stop shouting slogans and whistling.

Magadi Road underpass was thrown open to the public after it was inaugurated by Chief Minister Siddaramaiah, in Bengaluru on Saturday. VINOD KUMAR T

Matters did not improve, when Congress MLC H M Revanna screamed at Shetty to control his supporters.

The shouting and jostling did not stop even after the Chief Minister arrived and when the state anthem was being played. When he started speaking, Minister Krishnappa had to threaten the screaming supporters that they would have to resort to police action, if it did not stop.

Even Siddaramaiah himself warned that he would ask the police to take action. Not even such dire warnings helped matters and the programme was completed under the din.

Pvt varsity replaces bouquets with khadi towels

ENS @ Bengaluru

WHILE welcoming dignitaries with a bouquet is a common practice, Sri Siddhartha University in Tumakuru has replaced bouquets with 'Khadi hand towels'.

The first occasion when this came into effect was during the National and State National Service Scheme coordinators visit to the campus on Friday, where they were welcomed with khadi hand towels.

Speaking to Express, Dr Balakrishna Shetty Vice-chancellor said, "A month ago, a friend said that the bouquets he had received during his 70th birthday were almost a truck full. This set me thinking. I wondered if we could stop the bouquet culture at our campus and placed a proposal before the governing body regarding this and they agreed for it." During the event we saw the dignitaries using the hand towels. If we had given them bouquets, most of them would have left them behind. Usually most of the bouquets will become trash after a few hours or days. Our intention is we should not create unnecessary garbage," said Dr Shetty.

Henceforth, at any event within the campus or outside, dignitaries will be welcomed only with khadi towels, Shetty added.
